

Meeting the Child

Close your eyes for a moment. Imagine yourself at age five, six, or seven. You may feel a softening in your chest, or perhaps a sudden tightness in your throat. This is the child, still present in your body, still waiting to be seen.

1. Think of yourself at age 5-7. Complete this sentence:

The thing that child needed most—and did not receive—was .

.....

.....

.....

.....

2. What were you told (directly or indirectly) was “too much” about you?

I was told I was too (loud, sensitive, needy, wild, quiet, angry, emotional).

The message I received was: “.”

.....

.....

.....
.....

3. If your Inner Child could speak to you right now, they would say:

“I need you to know that .”

“I wish you would .”

.....
.....
.....
.....